Why Tenerife?

Tenerife is an ideal destination for cyclists thanks to its wonderful climate and the opportunity to train at altitude. The island offers an unparalleled combination of high elevation gain, beautiful coastlines, and quiet, rolling country roads.

Unlike Mallorca, for example, you can cycle long, flat stretches here if you so desire. However, it's Spain, so it's never truly flat. The roads are well-maintained and offer a wide variety of routes, ranging from easy rides through flat landscapes to challenging climbs in Teide National Park. This park is a must-see for any cyclist. The mild climate makes Tenerife an ideal cycling destination year-round. Spring and autumn are particularly popular with cyclists due to the pleasant temperatures and thriving nature. Even in the winter months, temperatures remain mild, allowing you to explore the island year-round.

Teide National Park

The impressive Teide National Park spans a large part of Tenerife. This breathtaking park is renowned for its exceptional landscape and cultural value. Home to Spain's highest mountain, Pico del Teide, the park offers an unforgettable experience for every cyclist.
